

Proposed Electorates Objection Form

Have your say on the proposed electorate boundaries and names

Between 20 November and 20 December 2019 you can have your say about the proposed electorate names and boundaries for the 2020 and 2023 General Elections. You can also ask to present your objection to the Representation Commission at a public hearing.

You can submit your objection using this form or our online tool at vote.nz.

Objections must be received by 5pm, Friday 20 December 2019.

Objections will be published online at vote.nz after 20 December 2019. We'll publish the names of objectors but we won't publish contact details provided on the form. If you include contact information with any supporting material this information may be published with the objection.

From 10 to 24 January 2020 you will be able to make counter-objections to any objections received. In February 2020, the Representation Commission will hold public hearings around the country for those who would like to appear in person. We'll confirm when and where the hearings will be held after the counter-objection period has closed. If you ask to be heard we'll contact you to confirm arrangements.

Key things to consider when making your objection

Electorates must have a similar number of people to make sure they have equal representation. An electorate cannot vary more or less than 5% from the population quota.

The limits for the number of people in each electorate are:

	quota	+/-5%
North Island general electorates	64,899	3,245
South Island general electorates	65,458	3,273
Māori electorates	67,582	3,379

In setting the electorate boundaries consideration must be given to criteria set out in the Electoral Act. You need to base your objection on the criteria we use when considering the boundaries:

- Existing electorate boundaries
- Communities of interest - including iwi affiliations in Māori electorates
- Infrastructure that links communities such as roads and bridges
- Topographical features such as mountains and rivers
- Projected variations in electoral populations over the next 5 years

The name of an electorate should be relevant to the district.

You can find out more about the boundary review at vote.nz.
